

Your 5-Minute Reset Guide

Five small resets you can do anywhere in five minutes or less. None of them need an account, a card, or a streak to protect. They all live inside the free Peakora Assistant.

1 The Breath Ring

A hard day usually starts in the body before the mind catches up. The breath ring slows that down: one slow 4-2-6 cycle - inhale for 4 seconds, hold for 2, exhale for 6.

- 1 Sit or stand somewhere you can be still for a minute.
- 2 Open Peakora and tap the breath ring on the Home tab (free, always).
- 3 Follow the ring for 10 cycles. Do not force it. Let the exhale be longer than the inhale.
- 4 When it ends, notice one thing: your shoulders are usually lower.

Why it works: a longer exhale is what many people find slows a racing heart. It is the fastest physical reset in the app.

2 The Mood Check

Half of managing a day is naming what is actually going on. Peakora's mood check is one honest feeling. No journaling homework, no streaks.

- 1 Log how you feel right now - one word or feeling is enough.
- 2 That is it. You are done.
- 3 Come back tonight if you want: two honest feelings, one day, and the shape of the week shows up in Insights.

Why it works: naming an emotion gives you a little distance from it. Two minutes, no effort, and a real record of your week.

3 One Soundscape, On Purpose

Sound changes how you feel faster than words do. The Soundscape Studio (free) has 8 ambient worlds - bowl, rain, fire, om, wind, binaural, ocean, night - layered and tunable.

- 1 For focus: rain or binaural, low volume, headphones or not.
- 2 For sleep: ocean or night, dim the screen, pick one track and put the phone down.
- 3 For a jittery mind: bowl or om - one layer, nothing else, three minutes.

Why it works: you are not waiting for a mood to arrive. You are choosing the soundtrack your brain gets to process. That is a decision, and it is yours.

4 One Quiet Minute

The hardest reset is the one with nothing in it - and often the most useful. One quiet minute with no goal, no track, no counting.

- 1 Set a one-minute timer (or just use your phone's clock).
- 2 Sit. Let your eyes rest on something soft. No swiping, no list-running.
- 3 When the minute ends, notice what changed. It is usually more than a minute's worth.

Why it works: the pause is the point. You are practicing being with yourself without doing anything - the skill every other reset builds on.

5 One Tiny Win

Momentum is not carried all day - it is rekindled, on purpose. The smallest win today is the thing tomorrow stands on. Write down one thing you will do today, and do it.

- 1 Write one thing, not a list. One thing that, if done, makes tomorrow lighter.
- 2 Make it embarrassingly small if today is heavy: drink water, step outside, send the text.
- 3 Do it. Then give yourself credit - that was the day's reset.

Why it works: deciding beats planning. One small action proves to you that momentum is possible today.